TWO BROTHERS HANGED.

Paying the Penalty of a Wanton and Cowardly Murder.

The History of the Crime—A Brutal and Senseless Deed—The Accidents of the Murderers.

—The Execution.

COLUMBIA, Ky., March 22.—Rude and Champ Fitzpatrick were hanged today for the brutal murder of Miller Hewson.

The murder was committed at Nevada, a voting place of Adair County, on the 11th day of August, 1883, which was the day of the election for State officers.

Miller Brewster, the victim, and Rude and Champ Fitzpatrick had been in the employ of Mr. James Pickett, a farmer of the Nevada neighborhood, who rather gave the preference to Brewster in matters connected with the work on the farm.

This gave rise to jealousy and hatred on the part of the Fitzpatricks against Brewster, and on the 11th day of August, 1883, they were on the streets of Nevada, and began quarreling with him, and with telling him on him and talking about him in the neighborhood. Brewster denied this, but said if he had done so he would take it back; that he did not want to have any trouble. Champ then struck Brewster on the head with a brick, and Rude followed him with a knife, inflicting several wounds, which caused him to bleed profusely.

During this time Rude, who was off at some distance, ran and putting his pistol close to Brewster shot him through the back. Brewster fell forward on his hands, while he was in a dazed state, and he walked around, and shot him through the head. Brewster did not strike or make any resistance during the struggle.

Brewster came from Tennessee to Adair County, where he had lived a part of the last five years. He was regarded as a harmless, inoffensive man. He left a widow and three or four children.

The execution was held for the murder at the September term, 1883, of the Adair Circuit Court, were brought to trial at the same time.

FIVE COUNCIL SCENE.

The Way They Do Things In the Peaceful Quaker City.

Mr. O'Rourke, an Eminent City Father, Proceeds to Make Things Generally Interesting—A General Drunken Row.

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—There was a disagreeable scene in the Select Council chamber to-day. Select Councilman O'Rourke, of the Twenty-fifth Ward, came into the chamber very drunk, and, for a long time, disturbed that body without securing any more serious results than the good-humored badgering of the members. Finally President Smith interrupted O'Rourke's stormy and ordered him to sit down. O'Rourke stubbornly refused. He had a right to speak and propose to speak, and nobody could stop him. President Smith grew red and white by turns. Mr. Green suggested that the Chamber take a ten-minute recess. There is no necessity for even a temporary adjournment," declared the President. "I am perfectly able to preserve order. He is disturbing the Chamber."

"No, I'm not," said O'Rourke, doggedly. "I am not disturbing the Chamber. I am only trying to get the attention of the President to order a small order his removal from the chamber." O'Rourke laughed derisively.

President Smith, I move that rule twenty-five, declaring that any person acting in an unruly or indecent manner in the chamber shall be removed, be respected," said Mr. Matthews, excitedly.

Then followed five minutes of comparative peace. But the discussion of the ordinance limiting the sale of meat by curbstone butchers was too much for Mr. O'Rourke, and he took the floor again. "I want it adopted," he declared after an incoherent speech.

"I move the gentleman sit down," yelled Mr. Hart.

"I am as good a man as any body in the chamber," said Mr. O'Rourke. "I am sorry," began Mr. Monroe, who is considered to ask for the enforcement of rule twenty-five.

"Oh! go to hell," roared O'Rourke. By this time the chamber was in a ferment. President Smith had risen from his chair.

The doorman and Clerk will remove the gentleman from the Twenty-fifth Ward from the room," he said quietly.

FIGHT WITH A BURGLAR.

The Desperate Encounter of a Boston Policeman.

The Enterprising Burglar Driven to Bay Turns Upon His Pursuer and Makes a Furious Resistance—Thrilling Adventure.

Boston, Mass., March 22.—"A man has broken into my house and I want an officer sent there to put him out," excitedly ejaculated Miss Hannah Willey, as she rushed into Station Four at 6:30 o'clock this morning. Miss Willey keeps a boarding house at 4 Boylston place. Patrolman H. W. Kendall accompanied her to the house, where he found the intruder had gained entrance by breaking a glass in a rear door, and was now concealed in the dark cellar. As the officer entered the cellar door the fellow sprang viciously upon him from his place of concealment and struck him a terrible blow with the fist. The men closed, and a fierce struggle ensued. Kendall is a stout, muscular man, but he was hardly a match for the ruffian, who fought with the ferocity and desperation of a tiger at bay. The two men struggled for a moment, swaying to and fro in the semi-darkness. The house-breaker took advantage of a good foothold, and by a powerful effort threw Kendall to the earth, being carried down himself in his grasp. With lightning quickness he wrested the officer's club (which Kendall had not been able to use from his hand) and the next moment was pounding him mercilessly over the head. Down came the club again and again on Kendall's unprotected head, till the blood flowed from great gashes in his scalp, and dabbled the hair in heavy streams. With every deadly blow the ruffian's rage seemed to increase, as if the passion for blood were aroused and could be satisfied with but one result. Half rising to his feet he kicked the officer in the stomach with his boots, continuing at the same time his murderous blows with his club. Just then Miss Willey, who had followed the officer to the cellar door, attracted the attention of the ruffian, and he rushed savagely upon her, striking her two heavy blows with the club upon the head. The fainting officer, by a supreme effort, managed to draw his revolver, and a moment later the report rang through the cellar. With a wild cry the ruffian threw up his arms and fell heavily to the ground, unconscious. The pistol had been well aimed, and the ball had entered the desperado's mouth, passing up through the brain, lodging close to the scalp on the crown. The officer staggered into the air, his blood streaming over his face, and called for help. Brother officers were soon at hand, and the wounded patrolman was taken to the station. This afternoon he has been vomiting blood, and it is a serious question whether he will recover. The wounded desperado was taken to the City Hospital, where he died in fifteen minutes. He was identified by Miss Willey as Jack Donovan, a hard character who had done odd jobs for her about the house. He had boasted that no single officer could take him. Officer Kendall had seen on the force just one year. Officer Burnett was one of the patrolmen who went to Kendall's assistance. Before entering the cellar he cocked his revolver, and afterward, in the excitement of the moment, put it in the pocket of his overcoat without uncocking it. He was charged with the overcoat from blood and dirt at the station when the revolver fell to the floor and went off, sending a bullet through Burnett's leg. The wound is serious, but not dangerous.

WAR WITH A COURT.

Resulting on Order of a United States Circuit Judge.

PORT PLEASANT, W. Va., March 22.—A conflict with Judge Jackson, of the United States Court, has been raised by the Key-Stone Bridge Company. That company builds bridges here for the United States Road, and has not been paid. It refuses to complete the bridge and holds possession until secured against loss.

The road being in the hands of a receiver and in need of a telephone line, Judge Jackson ordered the receiver to string a wire across the bridge. The Key-Stone Bridge Company resisted. Judge Jackson sent a United States Marshal from Charleston, W. Va., who got possession and held it till the wire was put across.

During the night the Bridge Company cut the wire and landed both ends on the bridges, resisting the United States Marshal's authority. An appeal was made to Judge Jackson, who ordered the Marshal to take possession and get an armed posse and enforce at all hazards the authority of the Court.

FOOD ADULTERATION.

Interesting Revelations Made in New York.

ALBANY, March 22.—The Senate Committee on Public Health, which has been investigating adulterations of food, reported today. They say they have discovered wholesale and alarming adulterations, dangerous to the consumer and depreciating property in the rural districts. The adulteration of butter by lard oil, lard oil, lard oil, was found in almost every town and city in the State, and in amount equal to half the production of natural butter. Investigations have been so disquieting that often they were only discoverable by chemical analysis. Out of thirty samples of butter purchased by the committee in New York only two were genuine. No labels to distinguish pure from lard butter are displayed as required by the existing law. The bogus butter is largely purchased by schools, boarding houses and second class hotels.

Minors Lose Their Lives.

LANSING, Mich., March 22.—Joseph Bowman, James Martin and William Sedgewick, three minors, were buried here today after a fall of rock at the Cleveland iron mine yesterday afternoon. The latter was taken out alive, but the two former were dead when reached by the rescuing party after half an hour's labor. The deceased were large families.

They Evicted the Cat. NEW JERSEY, Conn., March 22.—While a little child of three years, daughter of Mr. Kiley, was sleeping in its mother's room last night a cat was observed to jump on the bed, place its paws about the neck of the child and its mouth close to her mouth. The animal was holding the child's throat.
